

CV summary

Raquel Chuliá-Jordán received the B.Sc. degree in Physics and the PhD in Soft Matter Science from University of Valencia (the PhD was mostly carried out at the Johannes Gutenberg Universität, Mainz, with a DAAD /La Caixa Project). Currently, she is senior researcher in the “Materials at Extreme Conditions” Group in the Institute of Material Science of the University of Valencia (ICMUV). Previously, she was hired and invited researcher in several prestigious research centers: Max-Planck-Institute-for-Polymer-Research (Germany), Institut für Quanteoptik und Quanteninformation (Austria), University of Utrecht (Netherlands), Austrian-Institute-of-Technology (Austria), University Complutense of Madrid, and University of Edinburgh (UK). She was awarded with an IF Marie Sklodowska-Curie Fellowship in 2015. She has published 31 JCR publications and a book chapter.